Current Events From the Inside

In this period of hurried days, crowded with too many interests and too many activities of every sort, it is difficult, indeed, for even the most conscientious reader to keep up with what is happening in all parts of the world. Even the radio fails to give a clear idea of the significance of what telegraph and cable ask around the world and to most of us European conditions are difficult to understand. It is, therefore, a great privilege to obtain interpretations of diplomatic incidents and political coups.

It is only one with the most strongly developed want-to-know bump who is able to comprehend what the headlines mean by a day to day study of contemporary history as it is written by the daily press. One of the foremost want-to-know women in the United States is Miss Aline Barrett Greenwood, who is coming to Carmel, Saturday afternoon, November 14th, at 3 o'clock at Pine Inn, under the auspices of the Carmel Club of Arts and Crafts.

Miss Greenwood went abroad last year for an extended tour through England, Russia, France, Germany and Italy when she learned by close observation much about Europe's political and social conditions, a decade after the beginning of the World war. She interviewed Lloyd George after the former premier had discovered all that it meant to bear the burdens of the British Government responsibilities, she talked with Poincaire and she met Mussolini. It was her good fortune to get close-ups of the men and women who are foremost in the social and artistic as well as the political world.

With the key to current events gained by means of much travel as well as constant study, Miss Greenwood returned to America and all who have had the privilege of hearing her talk of what is happening with the world is ferment realized how well she has used her extraordinary powers of observation. Possessed of a keen brain and rare intuition she is quick to grasp situations; in other words, she has the understanding mind. She is a woman of charming personality with the sort of vivacity that gives sparkle to her conversation, even when she is presenting facts. When she goes on the lecture platform she is an educator of the most convincing character, one who makes men and women think seriously of what is happening every day. As straws show which way the wind blows, so insignificant incidents may point the way to supreme events. Miss Greenwood has a real mission in life. Through her desire to know world affairs she has made herself a broadcasting station and all those who listen in are her friends.

PRESIDENT'S THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION

The season approaches when, in accordance with a long established and respected custom, a day is set apart to give thanks to Almighty God for the manifold blessings which His Gracious and Benevolent providence has bestowed upon us as a nation and as individuals.

We have been brought with safety and honor through another year, and, through the generosity of Nature. He has blessed us with resources whose potentiality in wealth is almost incalculable; we are at peace at home and abroad; the public health is good; we have been undisturbed by pestilence or great catastrophe; our harvests and our industries have been rich in productivity; our commerce spreads over the whole world, and labor has been well rewarded for its remunerative service.

As we have grown and prospered in material things, so also should we progress in moral and spiritual things. We are a God-fearing people who should set ourselves against evil and strive in righteous livingg and observing the golden rule we should from our abundance help and serve those less fortunately placed. We should bow in gratitude to God for His many favors.

Now, therefore, I, Calvin Coolidge, President of the United States, do hereby set apart Thursday, the 26th day of November next, as a day of general thanksgiving and prayer and I recommend that on this day the people shall cease from their daily work, and in their homes or in their accustomed places of worship, devoutly give thanks to the Almighty for the many and great blessings they have received, and to seek his guidance that they may deserve a continuance of his favor.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be fixed.

Done at the City of Washington, this 26th day of October, in the year of our Lord, 1925, and of the Independence of the United States of America the 150th.

(Signed.)

CALVIN COOLIDGE

Another Landmark Gone

For years and years, especially in the years before the Pine Cone was established, the one method of obtaining publicity and advertising in Carmel, was to post a notice, be it for a lost dog, a stray cat, a show at old Arts and Crafts Hall, a bed-and-board announcement, or what not, on the Ocean avenue fence between Slevin's and Schweninger's.

The old board was a sordidly picturesque institution. The notices were posted without regard to regularity; some of them stayed there for years, some of them were put up only yesterday. They were all colors, natural and acquired. Sometimes a notice was torn down for spite—indeed, some were put up for the same reason.

Now the board has gone by the board. Ernest Schweninger has commissioned Contractor L. E. Gottfried to erect on the property a one-story office building, which will be the offices of Hatton Fields.

Climate And Good Coach Did It

Francis Lloyd Jr., is a freshman at McGill, and David Lloyd, due to the excellent coaching in Latin and mathematics, of Miss Kitty Smit of Carmel, was able to enter the first year high school, after practically three years' absence from school due to ill health after a severe attack of pneumonia.

Mrs. Lloyd has nothing but praise for the "free for all" Violet Ray treatment which the Carmel sun offered this summer. If Violet Ray is Food as claimed by some advanced health men then we are able to account for the 20 pounds gain in weight made this summer by both David and Francis.

Ghosts Very Busy This Year

Last Saturday night's Hallowe'en celebration, aside from the removal of board signs from various locations, took the form of soapy messages on the store windows. When the Pine Cone reporter got around Sunday morning some of the bright sayings had been removed, some by the owners, others by the kids under the direction of the city marshal. Here are a few that were copied verbatim: The Carmelita Shop: "Dear Dibbie's Darling Dresses, Undies, etc.," Norton's Grocery, "Fighting Bob;" Tice Electric Shop, "Even if a porch light is dim, it still has scandle power;" Pine Cone, "Weakly Bladder;" Carmel Bank, "Carmel Bunk;" Meat Market, "I eat my own meat;" Cabbages and Kings, "Second-hand clothing;" Postoffice, "City-Manager's office upstairs;" Dyeing Works, "Everything cleaned;" and Carmel News Co.; "You are coo-coo."

Return From Sketching Trip

Ira M. Remsen and Ferdmand Bergdorff have returned from their two months' sketching trip in Arizona. Ferde looks normal and natural but you ought to see Rem. In the first place, he's fat as a Turk. But in addition he owns the finest crop of pink spinach (Burbank)) in captivity. So thoroughly is he disguised that his friends do not know him. He fooled the bank, the postoffice and the police. If Teddy Roosevelt were alive, Rem would be pointed out as a type of undesirable citizen or nature fakir.

Mrs. Valentine Mott Porter left on Wednesday to spend the winter in New York.

Trustees Authorize House-Number Map

The city trustees held a regular meeting last Monday night. We'll say it was a "regular" meeting. All the trustees were there and the spectators' section was confortably filled. It was a chilly evening, but this did not detract from the interest in the proceedings.

Reading of three communications followed the reading of minutes. One was a letter from Fire Commissioner H. P. Larouette, in which he recommended, first, that no fire hose be purchased at this time, and second, that the board ask that Fire Chief Jasper E. Nichols be requested to hand in his resignation. The other letter was from Mrs. Florence Grant, protesting the amount of the taxes on her property and asking if there was any redress. There was none. The third letter from T. W. Morgan, Jr., lessor of the postoffice building, in which it was stated that there was sufficient space for the installation of more lock boxes. Placed on file.

Then came the presentation of three petitions in the matter of numbering the houses, which is a preliminary for carrier mail delivery. The first, favoring the proposition contained 364 names; the second, against, had 64 names; the third, neutral, 17. On this showing Trustee C. O. Goold moved the adoption of a resolution directing City Engineer H. D. Severance to prepare a house numbering map.

Dr. H. D. Main, county health officer, addressed the board concerning the advantages of permitting his office to act also in the capacity of city health officer here, as is done in Monterey and Pacific Grove. The trustees will make application to the board of supervisors for this service.

A committee of the board, with Deputy Street Superintendent A. P. Fraser, will take in hand the matter of caring for storm water on San Antonio street at the junction of Eighth, Ninth and Twelfth avenues. Concrete culverts and drains will probably be installed.

Responsibility for the delivery to the publisher of legal notices and the correct publication of the same was, at the request of City Attorney Argyll Campbell, placed in the hands of City Clerk Saidee Van Brower.

Reading of reports and payment of bills was the next proceeding, after which the board went into executive session to discuss the Larouette letter.

Listen For The Whistle

The axe has dropped! The Sword of Damocles has fallen. The Carmelites who assumed that Carmel would remain "different" so far as mail delivery is concerned, are due for a shock. But it will be a shock that will have many pleasant compensations.

Our city trustees, after mature deliberation, consultation with local and federal postoffice officials, and in the face of a numerously signed petition favoring the delivery of mail by carrier, has set in motion the proceedings necessary to put the system into effect.

Some little time will elapse before the system goes into effect. The houses must be officially numbered, mail boxes must be placed, routes arranged, time and number of deliveries scheduled, civil service examinations must be held, and a multitude of details worked out.

PROGRESS

EXTENDED education such as provided by the public schools of the country has exerted a gigantic influence in the past decade or two, which is being felt in all walks of life.

At a time when the theory and efficiency of public education is being attacked, when educators themselves so constantly change method and principle that they bewilder the average onlooker, when certain elements seek to lay the blame for the somewhat exaggerated vices of the present younger generation to this great institution and at a time when educators are rallying to support a new bill for elevating the cause of education to the rank it deserves, namely, a federal department with a representative at the President's Cabinet, this fact needs emphasis.

Many interested in the public schools sometimes feel that the press is indifferent, apathetic, or even hostile to the advancement, improvement, and support of a program for greater and enlarged facilities. Encouraging indeed, then, is the recent editorial comment appearing in one of the leading papers, in which it was declared that "by providing educational facilities for all, the nation insures for herself a glorious continuing advance into the future. What the past generation's schooling has done is richly evident."

Editorially, the Cincinnati Inquirer comes out wholeheartedly for the cause of popular education. This should reassure those who in the dust of present-day building of system, plant, principle and theory, fail to see, on looking backward, the great stretch of road already travelled toward the ideal "the American public school, non-partisan, efficient, democratic; for all the children of all the people; equal educational opportunities for all."

GET THE HABIT—BUY AT HOME

COMMUNITIES grow only in proportion to the support they receive from the people who make up the community. The Monterey Peninsula has no chance to improve in quality and size by the inhabitants investing their money or buying the necessities of life in other localities. People who cling to the misguided policy of "doing better" away from home often lose dollars in trying to save pennies.

The home merchant is honest and offers honest values. He can't afford to be otherwise, though he might be inclined to. He depends for his living from the community which he serves and he must give the community what it wants at a fair price.

When you are tempted to trade outside and buy something "just as good" at lower prices you should think twice before acting. If you are disappointed in merchandise bought at home, you can always get an adjustment. The merchant himself may have been cheated and he is generally willing to take the loss rather than have a dissatisfied customer. But the out of town merchant is not personally interested in you. His only hope is to sell you once and he does not have to take precautions to preserve your good will.

More than owing it to your community to trade at home, thus keeping your money in circulation at home you should give the home merchant the first opportunity to serve you, from a sound economic viewpoint.

THE TRAVEL DIARY OF A PHILOSOPHER

The spring of this year saw the publication of the first English translation of a book that was to mean much to the thoughtful reading public. Its appeal has been so widespread and the interest which it has aroused has been so intense that it seems to have come exactly when it was needed. It bridges a gulf which has been yawning between modern thinking and ancient wisdom.

Count Hermann Keyserling says that his book is to be read like a novel—and it has the essential quality of the novel in this respect—that it is a vital study of personality in this case—that of the author.

Although the journey is a physical one—from Esthonia, through the Red Sea to India, China, Japan and so on around the globe, this is only the outer form of the thing itself. It is really a spiritual journey of a most profound and revealing nature.

Count Keyserling's problem is familiar to many. He set out to find himself—to establish a centre through which he might be able to understand the true significance of all his experience.

His method of doing this was to rid himself of all his preconceived ideas—to assume a state of perfect fluidity, and to stand aside as it were and see what happened.

In Colombo, he responds to the luxuriant spirit of growth which expresses itself in the wild riot of plant life. "The mental life of tropical man is conprehensible only from the tropical point of view." Imbued with this spirit he approaches Buddhism and the doctrine of Maya, seeing here not the anaemic theory of Europe where the denial of physical reality is merely a superficial attitude, but a very real step toward self-realization.

Through Ceylon he comes to India, where he again puts himself into a state of receptivity before approaching a philosophy which is in tune with the very centre of his being. The chapters on India are perhaps the finest in the book, for Keyserling is primarily a mystic according to his own definition: "A man whose life emanates entirely from within, who lives in the essence of things and for that essence alone, whose consciousness has taken root in Atman, and who accordingly is completely truthful and pours out his inmost being without any inhibition."

Since this is the very spirit of India he feels at home there and is loath to leave. After a long stay in Adyar, Ellora, Delhi, Benares, he comes to the Himalayas and is profoundly stirred by the great silent miracle of them. "The Himalayas are not a mountainous group like others; it seems as if the moon had burst and suddenly planted itself upon the green earth, so cosmically great, so unearthly, so out of all relation with the manifestations of this planet do they appear."

He finds it hard to shake off the spell of India—and to approach China—and here the whole scene changes. Gradually he gets into touch with Confucianism. He finds that it has stood the pragmatic test perhaps better than any other philosophy in the world. Of the Chinese he says: "No one is rooted so deeply in the order of nature—no one is so essentially moral, and externals mean to no one as much as they do to him." Imbued with the spirit of Tao, the Chinaman of culture presents an aspect of quietism which is not understood by Western minds.

He contrasts the calm placidity of the Chinese with the vitality of the Japanese. Although he confesses in himself a lack of artistic appreciation, he is able to go deeply into the spirit of which is but the surface manifestation. Thus the Japanese spray of blossom against an airy sky, is symbolic of their life-pattern projected against infinity.

It is a difficult thing to condense a book so full of riches into the narrow scope of a review, so the passage across the Pacific, calling at Honolulu, can be merely mentioned.

His contemplation of the American scene, however, cannot be omitted. He finds the big trees in California symbolic. Personalities like these need virile children. Progress is mistaken for room. He sees Americans as a race of culture, surface for depth, the second dimension for the third—like children there is a tendency to allow a little knowledge to run away with them but this is only temporary and the tremendous life-force of the American is to him the most stimulating aspect of the national character.

In New York he becomes keenly aware that the materiality of the present, because experienced so intensely, is a guarantee of future spirituality.

When he arrives back home in Raykul his question is—Has he accomplished anything? And the answer is found as always in his greater depth of recognition.

Dickens Character Honored

So firm and lasting a hold on the public affection have many of the creations of Charles Dickens gained that the information that the Church of St. George the Martyr in Southwark, London—known throughout the English-speaking world as "Little Dorrit's Church"—is to be thrown open as a lunch-hour resting place in memory of his famous character, hardly even arouses comment. It is true that this church enjoys an added reason for the public interest, in that the name of the little person from whom the great novelist took his character is still preserved in the church register. Still this fact, without the help of Dickens, would never have earned fame to the church or been sufficient cause for its present utilization for the public welfare. Specifically the lunch room is to occupy the vestry in which Little Dorrit rested one night.—Christian Science Monitor.

Miss Jeri Safe, formerly of San Francisco, is locating in Carmel and is stopping with Mrs. Roberta Leitch on Monte Verde street. On Thursday, November 12, Miss Safe is opening "Rainbow's End," an atelier of modern art. Her shop is above the Court of the Golden Bough.

On Friday November 6, the fourth Unity Tea was held at Unity Hall, on Dolores street. Mrs. Joy Wilner, assisted by her daughter, was hostess. A unique musical program was arranged, and several unusual features.

IMMENSE APPEAL MAKES THE FOOL NOTEWORTHY FILM

"The Fool," William Fox's much heralded picturization of the Channing Pollock stage success, which opened last night and will play again tonight, at the Golden Bough Theatre may be pronounced as a sincere attempt to bring clean pictures before the public. It makes no pretense at the spectacular—it is just a big, straightaway dramatic story of a self-effacing young zealot minister who aspired and tried to live as Christ lived—a theme with a tremendous appeal.

There isn't a doubt that the picture, with its moralistic theme, will exert a tremendous appeal here and elsewhere throughout the country. And Edmund Lowe, handsome young Fox star, who plays the role of the minister-hero, Daniel, is going to make thousands of new friends and admirers by his superb and feeling performance of the part. Mr. Lowe was pretty near the whole picture, in our humble estimation, although Anne Dale, as the little cripple; Mary Thurman as the Magdalene, and Paul Panzer as Umanski, the Pole, shared much of the acting honors.

FAMOUS ARTIST KILLED IN MOTOR ACCIDENT

Word of the death of Ernest Haskell, internationally known artist and etcher, was received here by Gustav Laumeister, his father-in-law. Mr. Haskell was fatally injured when the automobile in which he was riding skidded over an embankment and overturned about 12 miles from Bath, Maine, last Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Laumeister are awaiting further information from their daughter, who was Miss Emma Laumeister, before deciding upon their next move. Mrs. Haskell is in Maine. Mr. Haskell was returning to his home in Bath when the tragedy happened.

Besides his widow, the artist is survived by four children, Ernest and Josephine; and Eben and Hildegard, by a former marriage. Mr. Haskell and Miss Laumeister were married five years ago.

Mr. Haskell was widely known for his etchings and water color work. His first renown came as a cartoonist for the London Daily News.

After spending a month in Palo Alto this summer with Mr. and Mrs. Laumeister, the Haskells came to Carmel, where the artist did considerable work in water colors. On his way East, in company with Ira Remsen and Ferdinand Bergdorff of Carmel and Monterey, Mr. Haskell made a number of sketches of the Arizona mesas. He planned to display the summers' work in New York.

Last year Mr. Haskell brought a splendid collection of Renbrandt etchings to the Pacific Coast, displaying them in San Francisco and Los Angeles.

The deceased was 49 years of age. He was born in Connecticut.

Water Sports Safer For Red Cross Work

Water sports in the United States have never been so safe as they are today, a survey of the work done by Life-Saving experts of the American Red Cross in the past year indicates.

Thousands of adults and young people were taught to swim proficiently by these experts during this period. In addition, 5,681 men, 4,187 women, and 13,024 juniors successfully passed the rigid tests of the Life Saving Service of the Red Cross. The total thus trained during the year—22,892—is 5,041 more than last year's results. The total membership of the Life Saving Corps of the Red Cross on June 30 was 72,810 persons.

Meeting the demand for qualified instructors and councillors in these camps, are the college men and women of the country, many devoting whole or part of their annual vacation periods to this field. Meeting the need of standardized instruction in Life-Saving, First-Aid, and kindred subjects, the American Red Cross conducted nine First-Aid and Life-Saving Camp Institutes this year with a total attendance of more than 600, in Maine, Massachusetts, New York, North Carolina, Indiana, Wisconsin, Oregon, and California. Representatives of Red Cross Chapters, summer camps, life guards at municipal pools and beaches, directors of physical education in schools, and others of this calibre made up the student body.

A number of city or regional institutions were conducted also during the winter at indoor pools to develop local experts. The aquatic school conducted by the New York Chapter was especially successful, it is stated. Inspired by this system, many camps, pools, bathing beaches, etc., have adopted in whole or in part, the Red Cross Life Saving and water-safety program. In the New England states alone, more than 180 camps employ councillors trained in these methods. A partial survey indicates more than 80 cities using the Red Cross senior test as a minimum requirement for their municipal life guards. Educational institutions have turned to it with enthusiasm.

This widespread instruction besides creating unprecedented numbers of expert life-savers, is developing a vast body of Americans who are at home in the water. All contributes to safety the year-round, for swimming is a recognized all-year sport today, records show.

The danger from water accidents is ever-present however where proper safeguards are not taken and to broaden this valuable Red Cross Service is one of the reasons why increased membership in the Red Cross is urged. The Annual Roll Call, during which the opportunity to assist all Red Cross work in many lines of endeavor is extended, will be held from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving November 11-26.

Large Volunteer Work of Red Cross

Volunteers under the Red Cross all over the United States are doing constantly for others, among their products being more than 90 per cent of the Braille reading matter for the blind, and a vast production of clothing and surgical dressings.

WIFE AND HUSBAND BOTH ILL WITH GAS

"For years I had gas on the stomach. The first dose of Adlerika helped. I now sleep well and all gas is gone. It also helped my husband." (signed) Mrs. B. Brinkley. ONE spoonful Adlerika removes GAS and often brings astonishing relief to the stomach. Stops that full, bloated feeling. Brings out old, waste matter you never thought was in your system. This excellent intestinal cacuant is wonderful for constipation.

S. P. Acts To Make Train Travel Cheaper

A new plan under which private organizations or any public group of 15 or more persons can arrange for special lo wrate excursion fares on the Southern Pacific is announced by F. S. McGinnis. rdl hrdlu shrdluhrd McGinnis, passenger traffic manager.

Given a five day notice so that the railroad can in accordance with the ruling of the Interstate Commerce Commission publish the requested tariff, the Southern Pacific will grant either of two rates depending on the number of persons in the party. Parties of 100 or more can secure round trip tickets at the one way fare; parties of 15 to 99 inclusive can secure one and one third fare for the round trip.

These excursion fares apply only where the regular one way fare does not exceed $30. Where the one way fare is $10 or less the railroad will grant a return limit of seven days; where it exceeds that sum, a 14-day return limit is granted. On the return trip members of the party may travel individually.

These excursion fares will apply between all points on the Company's lines west of and includingg Ogden, Salt Lake City, Utah; Albuquerque, New Mexico; El Paso, Texas; and from California points into Oregon.

MR. S.A.R., YOU'RE WRONG

S. A. R.

Sir:—

I have read your "Carmel." It read smoothly, till you pulled that Nantucket affair, then I said, "This bird is far from home when he pulls a comparison like this."

"The Nantucket of the West." Thats out. Where does Nantucket come in to be likened unto Carmel? You might as well compare my record with St. John, the Apostles: he's the chap that went to Heaven before he died.

Some one pointed you out to me the first day I landed in Carmel, and among your many failings he said your imagination was remarkable. I'll say so too, now that your Nantucket comparison has been turned loose.

Did you ever see a real tree on Nantucket? Did you ever see a hill that was anything higher than a sand heap?

There is just one thing about Nantucket; "Sconset" or any other part of the island, that is in keeping with Carmel—they both have salt water hard by and adjacent to.

"Nantucket of the West." Humph!

All About Carmel

Carmel. By "S. A. R." (Carmel-by-the-Sea: Pine Cone Press. 50 cents.)

From the San Francisco Bulletin

Here at last is a book about Carmel, its poets and peasants, freaks and real people, written in the true Carmelite spirit, which is not too much of anything. It is described as a "peninsula potpourri of pleasantry and philosophy," and nearly all of it is in paragraphic form.

One may read it from beginning to end, or open it anywhere, and go backwards or forwards, but all methods will yield equally agreeable results, since, once started, it is certain to be finished.

Everything about the little book is informal, which is in keeping with its subject matter.

It is only in the metropolitan newspapers that Carmelites appear to take themselves seriously and to think of nothing but art. Down there in one of the most beautiful spots in the world they eat, drink and make merry in the intervals between work, but because they do not want life to become standardized they get their backs up when the booster comes along threatening to impose upon them all the latest improvements.

Author "S. A. R." is master of the playful paragraph and the comic jingle. Like most humorists, he is not filled with enthusiasm for the dry law, but that doesn't seem to cause much worry to the folks down there by what used to be "the sad sea waves." They are no longer sad. On their bosom floats the merry mucilage and every Paul knows perfectly well what the wild waves are saying—that is, when the rum chasers are not around.

The author is no respecter of persons or publications, but there is no poison in the point of his darts, and each is feathered with good humor. While studiously avoiding all semblance to a guide-book, he has produced hundreds and hundreds of the best possible reasons for going to see and wanting to live in Carmel.

"IRON HORSE" VIVID STORY OF PIONEERS

How the express business followed the transcontinental railroad, expanding commerce and extending civilization into the West, is recorded with remarkable realism in the William Fox picture, "The Iron Horse," which shows at the Golden Bough Theatre next Saturday and Sunday nights.

And it is shown too, how express was shipped before the railroad crossed the prairie, when Kit Carson rode one horse steadily, day after day, for 4,000 miles. The little animal became so shy of Indians that he would leave the ground at the sight of a feather. But Carson got through with government mail, small express packages and money.

The express commenced transcontinental business with the completion of the railroad in 1869. William F. Harnden had commenced the first express business between Boston and New York on March 4, 1839. In 1840 Alvin Adams established his express service. Wells Fargo first had the pony express with Buffalo Bill Cody as their chief rider.

With the opening of the railroad, the express business became one of the most important and the most picturesque in existence. Express guards worked across the plains with their guns always in reach. Many a good man died defending his little wooden car from attack from Indians and bandits. They asked no quarter and gave none.

"The Iron Horse" reveals the thrilling life of this period of American history with telling effect. George O'Brien, J. Farrell MacDonald and Madge Bellamy have the leading roles. John Ford is the director.

Albert Gaster and Ralph Fife of Bridgeville, Pennsylvania, are week-end guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Douglass on Dolores street.

The American Red Cross serves in your name; you can make it more effective by adding your name to its membership during the Roll Call, Nov. 11-26.

HASH

In which may be found most anything or nothing; sometimes to your taste—sometimes not. Concocted and served by IRRESPONSIBLE AL

"Why the grouch?" we asked as we passed Frank Sheridan's headquarters this morning.

"Who wouldn't have a grouch if they had gone through life as I have?" "I've been in this State on twenty different occasions. I've played every town and tank from Shasta to San Diego. Four different times I've been stranded without any asset except "This Glorious Climate of California." Every blasted manager of every troupe I was with out here booked everything in the State except this Monterey Peninsula."

"Well, you're here now so it's all right."

"All right be blowed," said Sheridan "think of the sweet years I missed by not being here long ago," "and the tough part of it is that it's one of you writers that dragged me here first—my profession is disgraced. Leave me, I beg of you, pass on while I meditate."

Ah! We are vindicated. May B. Van Arsdale, writing for McCall's, says: "Hash is really a food aristocrat." Whereupon she proceeds to give its pedigree, dating from the time when Sir Potato was unknown, and "hash" consisted of cabbage and meat, being dished out in the one-arm joints under the trade name of "bubble and squeak."

And to the newcomer who asked what Carmelites do with their evenings. Frankly, we don't know. But here's our weekly schedule, subject to change without notice: We stay home; we visit our neighbor down the block; we break our neck trying to see a movie while being bombarded with some of the weirdest alleged music we have ever been exposed to; we attend the Monday Evening Circus over the post office (all the best people do that); we sit in comfortably cushioned wicker chairs and view some really good productions—minus music; we tune in the radio just at the time every darn station in the country is sending out stock quotations and weather reports; and a few other things Gus would like to know about. Oh yes, then ye go to bed at eleven and get up in time to be on the job before lunch.

Author not exactly unknown but, we hope, forgotten:

A lock of hair will oft' bring up
Sweet mem'ries like a flash;
But it brings up more than memories
When you find it in the hash!

The most High Deputy Everything has announced to a select group of friends the acquisition of a four-inch nickle-plated star, one billy, one set of perfectly-balanced and matched handcuffs with complete equipment, and the latest model police whistle, approved by the National Board of Fire Underwriters. The total purchase price, as indicated by the revenue stamps attached to the deed, was $3.98. Tears and Sawbuck, it is understood, are the contractors. The M. H. D. E. expressed regret that he did not take advantage of a special offer made during the period of the sale, of a pair of Oregon Boots for 49c if cash in full accompanies order.

Don't forget to razz us on that "lock of hair" stuff. We've got it comin'.

ART NOTES

THE UHLE COLLECTION

The finest Peruvian pottery collection in the world, from the viewpoint of the archaeologist as well as from that of the amateur collector, belongs to the University of California Museum of Anthropology. The entire collection consists of 809 pieces, 264 of which are pots completely preserved or significant collections of shreds taken from one site.

This pottery from the valley of Ancon in Peru represents a part of the work of Dr. Max Uhle, whose name is foremost among South American archaeologists, and who spent four months in 1904 at the site.

Under the title of "The Uhle Pottery Collections from Ancon," by William Duncan Strong, research fellow in the department of anthropology at the state university, a description of these famous pieces of Peruvian workmanship has just been published in the university series in American Archaeology and Ethnology.

This publication represents an effort to give a scientific analysis of the potteries of the Ancon valley, based on an objective study of the potteries, and comparison of the findings with the condensed account of Dr. Uhle's excavations and discoveries given by the scientist upon his return in 1904 from the expedition conducted under the auspices of Mrs. Phoebe A. Hearst.

RUSSIAN ARTIST COMING

Dey de Ribcowsky, Russian marine painter, is shortly to locate a studio on the Monterey Peninsula.

The Russian was a nephew of the last Russian Im erial Ambassador, Count Izvolsky, at Paris during the World war until the fall of the Czar. One of his early paintings was a portrait of the Czar.

Ribcowsky later went to South America and at Buenos Aires founded the Academy of Beaux Arts. Since coming to North America the painter has exhibited at New York, Boston and in various cities on the Pacific Coast.

HISTORY OF AMERICAN ART

"The History of American Art Ideals" will be the title of the book to be completed in the near future by Professor Eugene Neuhaus, head of the art department at the University of California. Professor Neuhaus is widely known in the United States as an artist, critic and teacher of art principles. His book, "The Appreciation of Art," is used to a large extent in universities throughout the country.

Professor Neuhaus leaves the university next semester on a six-months' trip during which time he will make a tour of all the important art galleries east of the Mississippi. He is also planning to complete all arrangements for his first individual exhibit since 1913. This art show will be exhibited in Haviland Hall on the Berkeley campus in September, 1926, according to the California art department head.

"There are evidences of a great impetus of interest in art in the United States," said Professor Neuhaus in discussing the prospects for the growth of a national art.

TO PAINT THE WINDJAMMERS

Admirers of the work of Gordon Grant, illustrator and painter of marines, now of New York but formerly a San Franciscan, are enthused by the exhibit of marine views from his brush recently shown at Vickery's.

Grant of late has been very busy at his easel, but has not let the quantity of the work interfere with its quality. He will give an exhibition in New York shortly.

The artist plans to spend next summer in California and will give most of his working time, while here, to Oakland. There are, he claims, more old-time windjammers across the bay from San Francisco than anywhere in the world. And he proposes to use them as subjects for future paintings.

Announcement is made that Jo Mora, creator of the Serra sarcophago and many other notable sculptured works, has been selected to design the monument to mark the base meridian in Coutra Costa county.

Dairy Cow Efficient Food Producer

Properly built stalls cut down work and bacteria.

© Underwood & Underwood

Keep the utensils clean.

With increasing rentals and values of farm lands, dairy farming is rapidly replacing other types of live stock farming. A dairy cow producing 8,000 pounds of milk a year furnishes 1,000 pounds of dry matter, all of which is edible and digestible. A two year old steer weighing between 1,200 and 1,300 pounds furnishes about 550 pounds of dry matter, not all of which can be used for food. In other words a fairly good producing dairy cow furnishes twice as much edible dry matter in one year as a good two year old steer when he is killed for meat. A cow can be kept for additional years of service, while to replace the steer, another animal must be fed for a period of two years.

The United States consumption of milk per capita has increased from 42 gallons of whole milk in 1918 to more than 54 gallons in 1925.

With growing acceptance of milk as a food has come an increasing knowledge of the proper care of milk on the farm. Because odors from foods and animals in the cow stable are easily taken up by milk, injuring its flavor, they must not come in contact with the milk. Removal of the milk from the stable as soon as possible reduces the amount of dust and dirt entering it and keeps down the bacterial growth in the milk.

Bacteria increase rapidly in warm milk causing it to sour quickly. Removal of the animal heat from freshly drawn milk by lowering the temperature to that of cold well water (approximately 60° F.), greatly aids in preventing bacterial growth. A well lighted, well ventilated milk house, not too close to the stable, is also very helpful.

Cleanliness in the stable is vitally necessary. The stall platform should be just long enough for the cow to stand comfortably without room to spare; otherwise, the cow will become dirty from droppings when she lies down. The gutter should be wide and deep. A good gutter is 16 inches to 18 inches in width and 9 or 10 inches below the platform. Bedding should be clean and plenteous.

Long hair on the flanks, udders and tail above the switch of the dairy cow should be removed at regular intervals. Removing this long hair removes the clinging places of dirt which otherwise will fall into the milk pail in quantities. Keeping the hair short on these parts of the cow permits cleaning in much less time and more thoroughly. Brushing should never be neglected. It removes loose particles sticking to the body. When the hair is short, wiping the udders with a damp cloth just before milking, is an easy and important aid in securing clean milk.

It is generally recognized that most of the bacteria found in milk finds its source in dirt clinging to the cow and dropping into the pail during milking time. Simple precautions will practically eliminate this source of bacterial growth and dairymen find themselves well repaid for the little time necessary in taking such precautions.

Pine Needles

Ralph Skene was registered at the Chancellor in San Francisco last week-end.

Mrs. Mary L. Hamlin is leaving today for Syracuse, New York, where she will spend some time visiting her sons.

Charles Berkey was back at the bank this week. For a fortnight he cavorted about southern California and northern Mexico.

Mrs. Josephine Loomis, who has been visiting her parents in Hollywood for the past two months, has returned to Carmel.

George T. Murdock, an artist of Port Henry, New York, is expected to arrive here any day. He will spend the winter here.

Mrs. Clara Bachman, manager of the local Goldstine store, left last Sunday for Milwaukee, where she will visit her parents.

Seymour Heathorn and his mother Mrs. M. C. Heathorn, who have been vacationing in their cottage here, have returned to Oakland.

Recent guests at Monte Verde apartments were Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Perry. For many years Mr. Perry has been City Librarian of Los Angeles.

The Gottfried house in Carmel Woods is now the residence of the Jack Holts. The Gottfrieds are occupying their large house in south Carmel.

Mrs. M. C. Chapin, her daughter, Mrs. Flora Geldert and Mrs. Gertrude Stepp, were here for a day or two this week. They like to get away from San Francisco occasionally.

Mrs. Maude Isabel Hogle has returned from her eastern trip. Much has happened in Carmel since she left, and it will require some little time for her to catch up with current events.

Mr. and Mrs. Jimenez and their two sons, Warren and Roy, have returned from a two months' trip to St. Louis, visiting relatives and friends. Mr. Jimenez feels fine after a long rest and is available for work in Carmel.

If the paper looks kind of scorched this week don't blame us. Wreardon's Wreckers just "hooked up" the new press—nine speeds forward and reverse. Lee's just learning to shift gears, and he takes everything in high to avoid shifting.

Fred D. Vibert, former publisher of "The Pine Knot" at Cloquet, Minn., was a visitor here last week. He and his wife are making a leisurely trip through the Western states. Of course Mr. Vibert did not fail to inspect the Pine Cone plant.

The successor of the late Mike Noon, veteran constable, has been appointed by the board of supervisors. George T. Kinloch, former theatre manager and ex-service man, has landed the plum. The term which he will complete expires in January, 1927.

San Jose, it is rumored, is to have a little theatre. It is one of the few cities of this size which has not such an institution. The interesting part of this story is the intimation that Arthur Cyril, former director of the Arts and Crafts Theatre here, is to be in charge. Duke Cyril is now living near Los Gatos.

Mrs. Roberta Leitch has just returned from a few days' visit in the bay region, where she was the guest of Mrs. B. Creelman Floyd of Claremont.

Vacationers here last week were Mr. and Mrs. John O. Dresser from San Francisco. Mr. Dresser is Pacific Coast manager of Blair and company, bond brokers.

At their charming home in Carmel Woods, Mr. and Mrs. Kerr F. Albertson have as guests for two weeks, George A. Skinner and his daughter of Long Beach, of which city Mr. Skinner was formerly city attorney.

Carmel is to have another resident M. D. C. H. Lowell and Mrs. Lowell of Los Angeles arrived last week and have rented the Hazelton house on San Antonio street, where the doctor, who is a retired naval surgeon, will hang his shingle.

George Sterling, poet, one time Carmelite, is editing "The Overland Monthly." A name that should help to give interest to a magazine so long carried on. Others helping are R. L. Burgess, Charles Coldwell Dobie and John Kenneth Turner.

Professor F. E. Lloyd MacDonald, Professor of Botany, McGill University, arrived in Montreal the past week after lecturing at the University of California, and at several Canadian Universities on his way home from Carmel, where the Lloyds spent the past summer.

Richard Pederson has taken over the business of the Western Union Telegraph Company in this city, with an office on Ocean avenue, opposite the bank. In order to assure prompt and efficient service, it is requested that residents and visitors file their addresses with the clerk in the new office.

Drama students, dramatic critics with information concerning first productions, and local little theatre enthusiasts are invited to send news items to Joseph Lawren, 220 West Forty-second street, New York, for inclusion in "The Drama Year book of 1925." Grateful acknowledgement will be made in the pages of the year book.

Mrs. Evadna Laphan arrived in Carmel last evening, and will be the guest of her mother, Mrs. S. B. Hunkins, for six weeks. Mrs. Laphan comes directly from the Annual Music Festival sponsored by Mrs. Sarah Coolidge, which was held in Washington, D. C. this year.

Tomorrow (Sunday) from 2:30 until 5 p. m., Mrs. Young Hunter's lovely Jesso panels will be o nexhibition at her studio on Casanova street between Twelfth and Thirteenth. The panels are leaving next week for exhibition in the East.

Strong Membership Appeal In Red Cross Disaster Relief

Asking themselves "What if disaster should visit our city?" the leading citizens of many communities of the United States have adopted the Scout motto to "Be Prepared."

Impressed by the frequency and the wide range of peace time calamities in their country, they have organized their communities with the thoroughness which normal conditions permit, against the possibility of a time when there will be no chance for thought or plan. Red Cross Chapters in many localities are similarly prepared.
